

Regional studies in South Australia

There are a number of institutions relevant to and advancing regional studies in South Australia. The following are perhaps the most significant:

The Centre for Housing, Urban and Regional Planning (CHURP) is a research Centre at the University of Adelaide: We comprise a network of researchers, academics and other practitioners whose shared vision is to undertake high quality housing, urban, regional and planning research and disseminate their findings for the betterment of society.

See link: <https://www.adelaide.edu.au/churp/>

Department of Urban and Regional Planning University of South Australia: Core areas of the program include Planning Policy and Law, the Economics of Property Development, Social Planning, Sustainable Urban Design, Energy Efficient Settlements and Buildings, Transport Planning and Environmental Impact Assessment

See link: <http://www.unisa.edu.au/IT-Engineering-and-the-Environment/Natural-and-Built-Environments/Future-students/Postgraduate-programs/Urban-and-Regional-Planning/>

The Planning Institute of Australia: Planning Institute of Australia (PIA) is the national body representing planning and the planning profession. Through education, communication and professional development, it is the pivotal organisation serving and guiding thousands of planning professionals in their role of creating better communities.

See link: <https://www.planning.org.au/>

The Australian Housing and Urban Research Institute: AHURI is a national independent research network with an expert not-for-profit research management company, AHURI Limited, at its centre.

See link: <https://www.ahuri.edu.au/about-us/who-we-are-and-what-we-do>