Option 1: The historic centre of the city – This tour will look at urban regeneration, heritagization and touristification of the old quarter; the implementation of the new buildings in the historic city (e.g. CGAC, Ánxel Casal Library)

Option 2: San Pedro neighbourhood – The controversies between the neighbours and the tourists; the urban transformations caused by the (re)invention of the Way of Saint James in the city; a gentrification process?

Option 3: University heritage buildings – which tourism use? How to manage the issues regarding the balance between students' and academic life on the one hand, and tourists on the other?

Option 4: Green infrastructure and the particular development of the notion of greenbelt in Santiago. The conflicts regarding several urban parks, especially in the Sar River environs, and the relationship of the city with its rural fringe.

Session Organiser(s) Andrew Beer - UniSA Business School, Australia Sarah Ayres - University of Bristol, UK Jiri Blazek - Charles University in Prague, Czech Republic	Our workshop needs your input to help us consider the contribution place-based policy makes to the productivity and wellbeing of national, regional and local economies. The growth of place-based policy approaches has the potential to make a significant contribution to communities across a number of policy domains, including the promotion of innovation, the development of local leadership capacities, and in managing significant economic transitions. But how do we identify the determinants of success in the development and implementation of place-based policies? How do we identify new opportunities for their application? Have your say about how policy makers can better leverage place-based policies to achieve better outcomes across diverse spatial scales

12.30-14.00	Lunch
14.00-14.45	Discuss and Debate Sessions
Session Title:	Strengthening the Impact of Research on EU Local Development Policies	Room 8
Session Organiser(s) LDnet	The discussion will kick off with an overview of challenges of connecting research with policy tools targeting local development, presented from the perspective of policy makers, practitioners and researchers. A possible practical outcome of the discussion could be proposals and recommendations for strengthening the linkages between local development policy and research, including the possibility of creating a “community of experts” around the themes of local development and smart villages.
Speakers: Michel Laine - AEIDL (practitioners’ perspective) Urszula Budzich-Tabor - FARNET/LDnet (practitioners’ perspective) Nicola Francesco Dotti - VUB (researchers’ perspective) Terry Stavropoulos - DG Regio (policy makers’ perspective)

Thursday 6th June Policy Day
14.00-14.45	Discuss and Debate Sessions
Session Title:	Encounters between Border Studies and Regional Studies	Room 12
Chair:	Juan-Manuel Trillo-Santamaría, University of Santiago de Compostela, Spain
Session Organiser(s) Association of Borderland Studies (ABS) Speakers: Anssi Paasi - University of Oulu, Finland Anne-Laure Amilhat Szary - Université Grenoble Alpes, France Francisco Lara-Valencia - Arizona State University, USA / President of the ABS Victor Konrad - Carleton University, Canada James Scott - Karelian Institute, University of Eastern Finland Jussi Laine - Karelian Institute, University of Eastern Finland, Joensuu / Vice President of the ABS Christophe Sohn - Luxembourg Institute of Socio-Economic Research (LISER) Esch-sur-Alzette, Luxembourg / Co-editor in chief of the Journal for Borderland Studies		Despite some obvious points of convergence between regional studies and border studies, the exchanges and synergies between the two fields remain somewhat limited. One aspect where significant progress could be made relates to the study of the effects of borders on the development of border regions. On the one hand, the analysis of border effects by regional studies and regional science is generally based on the understanding of borders as barriers to interactions, the main objective being the measurement of the extent and persistence of this negative effect and its impact on the development of neighboring areas. On the other hand, border studies and border theory have largely emphasized the multidimensional and ambivalent nature of borders, which can act as barriers or as resources and can therefore have both negative and positive effects for border regions and their inhabitants. Better consideration of the complexity and multifaceted nature of borders in the analysis of their effects could therefore lead to a renewed understanding of the role and significance of borders for the social and economic development of border regions and cities and, more largely, the impact of processes of regional integration. Moreover, in an era marked by security-led rebordering discourses and policies, highlighting the fact that relatively open borders do not necessarily represent threats but may also have opportunities and resources could prove salutary.

Chair:
Participants Andy Pike – CURDS, Newcastle University, UK Sarah Ayres – University of Bristol, UK David Bailey – Aston University, UK Ben Derudder – Ghent University, Belgium Andy Jonas – University of Hull, UK Simona Iammarino – London School of Economics, UK	Infrastructure systems provide the services which we all rely upon to live our day-to-day lives. Through new conceptual work and fresh empirical analysis, this book investigates how financialisation engages with city governance and infrastructure provision, identifying its wider, long-term implications for urban and regional development, politics, and policy. Proposing a more people-oriented approach to answering the question of ‘What kind of urban infrastructure, and for whom?’, this book addresses the struggles of national and local states to fund, finance and govern urban infrastructure. It develops new insights to explain the socially and spatially uneven mixing of managerial, entrepreneurial and financialised city governance in austerity and limited decentralisation across England. As urban infrastructure fixes for the London global city-region risk undermining national ‘rebalancing’ efforts in the UK, city statecraft in the rest of the country is uneasily having to combine speculation, risk-taking and prospective venturing with co-ordination, planning and regulation. This panel session aims constructively and critically to explore and discuss the book and its conceptual, theoretical and empirical contributions, and ramifications for politics and policy.

Speakers: Martin Henning , University of Gothenburg, Sweden Anssi Paasi , University of Oulo, Finland Jesus Valdaliso , University of the Basque Country, Spain Andy Pike , Newcastle University, UK	Before the discussion starts, the chairs will give a presentation about the ReHi-network. They will sketch a research agenda called 'New Regional History' which gives directions to a more concrete follow-up of the network. This agenda will be illustrated with concrete project ideas in which the drivers of inequality in cities and regions, as well as the initiatives to combat these inequalities, should be researched from a longer time perspective. After this presentation, four experienced researchers will reflect on these ideas, and share their own beliefs about why it is important to bridge the gap between History and Regional Studies.

Organiser(s)	Nicola Francesco Dotti, Vrije Universiteit Brussel, Belgium Marcin Dąbrowski, Delft University of Technology, the Netherlands Leaza McSorley, University of Sunderland, UK CPnet: The Regional Studies Association (RSA) Research Network on EU Cohesion Policy (CPnet) aims to provide a forum for debating EU cohesion policy, its effectiveness, impacts, paradoxes, and its future. Since 2011, our Research Network has been fully active within the RSA community, having successfully organised ten workshops and special sessions at all the RSA conferences between 2014 and 2018 (Izmir 2014, Piacenza 2015, Graz 2016, Dublin 2017 and Lugano 2018). The CPnet has succeeded in animating the policy debate with two policy-oriented workshops in Brussels, where we discussed our papers with high level EU policy-makers (MEPs, Commissioner’s cabinet, EU Commission staff, Committee of the Regions and other high-level EU policymakers). We have also contributed to the academic debate with three edited volumes and one special issue of Regional Studies – these were based on the outcomes of our RSA-funded workshops.

Saturday 8th June
09.00-16.00	(Pre-registration only)
2nd Networking Workshop for Early and Mid-Career Women in Regional Studies and Regional Science
The post PhD period can include challenges and uncertainties around roles, locations, contracts and funding. This time of life also frequently coincides with personal change such as relationship change, family planning, buying of first homes, moving abroad and increased levels of travel. Mid-Career Scholars face new challenges in their academic career when starting a faculty position, e.g. a lectureship or an assistant professorship. In this period each scholar must find strategies to balance the different responsibilities in teaching, administration and research. Academics in this transition often make unconscious decisions about their style of leadership or teaching. An important element in dealing with these uncertainties and in taking conscious decisions is access to a strong network, the chance to plan and discuss career opportunities and the opportunity to discuss these issues with role models, mentors and coaches. For this reason, the Regional Studies Association supports this members' led network specifically designed for female early and mid-career researchers in the fields of regional studies and regional science. The aim is to provide a platform for network building and to offer conversations with established female researchers in an informal setting. By funding the workshop, the RSA hopes to give impetus to growing a strong network and a series of related events. Following the dynamic 1st Networking Workshop held in October 2018, the 2nd edition foresees to focus on career development opportunities and soft skill development. The networking workshop aims at developing a community to support network members during their whole career. We aim to provide a forum for exchange led by participants wishes bringing in external support through coaches and experienced academics.
