

REGIONAL STUDIES ASSOCIATION ANNUAL CONFERENCE 2019

Pushing Regions beyond their Borders

University of Santiago de Compostela, Santiago de Compostela, Spain

5th – 7th June 2019

POLICY THURSDAY, 6th June 2019

The RSA will hold its third POLICY DAY on 6th June 2019 as part of the RSA's Annual Conference. The day will feature plenary presentations, panels, special sessions and paper sessions on issues and inputs concerned with place-based policies.

POLICY PANEL

Organised in partnership with the Directorate-General for Regional Policy of the European Commission, Belgium.

This panel will discuss how to promote growth of jobs in cross border regions and aims to go beyond the EU cooperation programmes. Despite the single market, obstacles are still present in border regions and strong cooperation requires multilevel engagement. In particular, legal and administrative obstacles often require national governments to engage with regional and local stakeholders to find solutions. The EU is promoting new tools such as the European Cross Border Mechanism and new approaches to support cooperation through both dedicated cooperation programmes and the mainstream programmes.

Panellists:

- Ignacio Sanchez Amor, Secretary of State for Territorial Cooperation, Spain
- Nathalie Vershelde, Deputy Head of Unit, European Commission, DG Regional and Urban Policy, Unit D2 – Interreg, Cross-Border Cooperation, internal borders, Brussels, Belgium
- Jesús Gamallo, General Director for External Relations and EU, Regional Government of Galicia, Spain
- Dr Franziska Sielker, Senior Research Associate, Department of Land Economy, University of Cambridge, UK and Interim Professor, International Planning Studies, Technical University of Dortmund, Germany
- Laurent Frideres, Head of Unit for Evidence and Outreach, ESPON EGTC, Luxembourg

Discuss and Debate Sessions

Session Title:

Encounters between Border Studies and Regional Studies

Room 12

Chair:

Juan-Manuel Trillo-Santamaría, University of Santiago de Compostela, Spain

Session Organiser(s)

Association of Borderland Studies (ABS)

Speakers:

Anssi Paasi - University of Oulu, Finland

Anne-Laure Amilhat Szary - Université Grenoble Alpes, France

Francisco Lara-Valencia - Arizona State University, USA / President of the ABS

Victor Konrad - Carleton University, Canada

Jussi Laine - Karelian Institute, University of Eastern Finland, Joensuu / Vice President of the ABS

Christophe Sohn - Luxembourg Institute of Socio-Economic Research (LISER) Esch-sur-Alzette, Luxembourg / Co-editor in chief of the Journal for Borderland Studies

Despite some obvious points of convergence between regional studies and border studies, the exchanges and synergies between the two fields remain somewhat limited. One aspect where significant progress could be made relates to the study of the effects of borders on the development of border regions. On the one hand, the analysis of border effects by regional studies and regional science is generally based on the understanding of borders as barriers to interactions, the main objective being the measurement of the extent and persistence of this negative effect and its impact on the development of neighboring areas. On the other hand, border studies and border theory have largely emphasized the multidimensional and ambivalent nature of borders, which can act as barriers or as resources and can therefore have both negative and positive effects for border regions and their inhabitants. Better consideration of the complexity and multifaceted nature of borders in the analysis of their effects could therefore lead to a renewed understanding of the role and significance of borders for the social and economic development of border regions and cities and, more largely, the impact of processes of regional integration. Moreover, in an era marked by security-led rebordering discourses and policies, highlighting the fact that relatively open borders do not necessarily represent threats but may also be opportunities and resources could prove salutary.

Parallel Sessions [4]

Session Title:

Authors Meet Readers: Financialising City Statecraft and Infrastructure (Elgar) – Andy Pike, Peter O'Brien, Tom Strickland, Graham Thrower and John Tomaney

Room 6

Chair:

Participants

Andy Pike – CURDS, Newcastle University, UK
Sarah Ayres – University of Bristol, UK
David Bailey – Aston University, UK
Ben Derudder – Ghent University, Belgium
Andy Jonas – University of Hull, UK
Simona Iammarino – London School of Economics, UK

Infrastructure systems provide the services which we all rely upon to live our day-to-day lives. Through new conceptual work and fresh empirical analysis, this book investigates how financialisation engages with city governance and infrastructure provision, identifying its wider, long-term implications for urban and regional development, politics, and policy.

Proposing a more people-oriented approach to answering the question of 'what kind of urban infrastructure, and for whom?', this book addresses the struggles of national and local states to fund, finance and govern urban infrastructure. It develops new insights to explain the socially and spatially uneven mixing of managerial, entrepreneurial and financialised city governance in austerity and limited decentralisation across England. As urban infrastructure fixes for the London global city-region risk undermining national 'rebalancing' efforts in the UK, city statecraft in the rest of the country is having uneasily to combine speculation, risk-taking and prospective venturing with co-ordination, planning and regulation.

This panel session aims constructively and critically to explore and discuss the book and its conceptual, theoretical and empirical contributions and ramifications for politics and policy.

Speakers:	Before the discussion starts, the chairs will give a presentation about the ReHi-network. They will sketch a research agenda called 'New Regional History' which gives directions to a more concrete follow-up of the network. This agenda will be illustrated with concrete project ideas in which the drivers of inequality in cities and regions, as well as the initiatives to combat these inequalities, should be researched from a longer time perspective. After this presentation, four experienced researchers will reflect on these ideas, and share their own beliefs about why it is important to bridge the gap between History and Regional Studies.
